DEDICATION

O THE RIGHT REVEREND MON-SIGNOR CORNELIUS CROWLEY,

at the inception of his career as president of our college, we respectfully dedicate this 1936 "Annales." Blessed with a gentle, unfailing humor and a tolerant wisdom born of daily contact with human nature, our beloved Monsignor has proved his exceptional ability and deep interest in New Rochelle. It is our earnest wish that he may find in his new work a satisfaction and an appreciation which will increase with each succeeding year.

F O R E W O R D

Each college year demands a record—and this is ours. For the seniors it should be a book of memories, the final volume of the set. For the rest of the student body, we hope that it may help them to remember the class of 1936. We offer our sincere appreciation to Mother Ignatius who has supervised all our efforts. To Anne Donahue, we are grateful for her generosity. Without the criticism and encouragement of Sterling J. Hiles and Frank Powers we would never have produced the book. To these, to all the classes, and our advertisers, we wish to express our gratitude for their enthusiastic support.

he spirit of Mother Irene will ever permeate New Rochelle. Gentle, kind, and strong of will, she saw her ambitions realized, and became, in the realization, an ideal. We who proudly call ourselves her children will always look to her for guidance and will try to emulate the beautiful character she possessed. God was kind to give us such a gracious mother and glorious foundress. May her soul rest in peace!

There is no more lovely sight than the campus in the spring, unless it be the stately buildings gleaming with the perfection of new snow.

LILLIAN MARION ALAIMO

Bachelor of Arts

43 Whitworth Street, Thompsonville, Conn.

• A girl of a retiring nature, but one who possesses all those characteristics that are ever admirable, is Lillian. By her very reserve, she reveals to her friends the true depth of her personality. A steadfast interest in science, combined with her unwavering perseverance, should bring to Lillian the success that she richly deserves in her chosen work.

ROSANNE ALLIGER

Bachelor of Arts

2 Grace Court, Brooklyn, N. Y.

• The euphony which makes Rosanne Alliger's name such a delight to the ear is paralleled by the harmony of qualities which makes the girl behind the name such a pleasure to know. Tall, blonde and gracious, Rosanne has engraved an artistic impression on the college, and in her four years here she has proven her merit as a valuable friend.

• Rita's is a changing self whose every mood has something which cannot be encompassed in words. A keen mind and a clever tongue rank her high in debating; a humor all her own, a candid, friendly independence, make her prominent in the campus activities. No one talent, virtue, or fault, but all, blend together to make her so essentially Rita.

• The adjective "versatile" most aptly describes Isabel—she golfs, swims, plays tennis, drives a car, and, as well we know, debates, acts, and lectures. And, with regard to studies, Isabel has been an honor student, majoring in the social sciences. She possesses a lovely grace which, combined with her intellectual power, should give her a successful career as a lawyer.

• Virginia is usually calmly reserved but it is not hard to discover her disposition. She is a companion of great value, for she is ever willing and delighted to take part in any prank or fancy. Her quiet demeanor has not prevented the forming of many friendships and we who know her can wish her nothing but the greatest of happiness.

MARY THERESA FITZSIMONS

Bachelor of Arts

1360 Nelson Avenue, New York, N. Y.

• Mary has a restrained exuberance but a laugh that it is impossible to curb. To think of Mary is to think of Alys, for their friendship has won the respect of all who have watched it grow. Mary's interest is in "Tatler," scholarship and current events. Her vivaciousness, too, radiates in social life; quick wit and pleasant repartee are foremost characteristics.

MARY ELIZABETH FOLEY

Bachelor of Arts

80 Atlantic Avenue, Fitchburg, Mass.

• Our junior year brought us Mary, a girl of unusual versatility; her musical, literary, and dramatic talents being surpassed only by her unassuming knowledge in the classroom. Talent, an effervescent sense of humor, a fine appreciation of the beautiful, that's the picture of Mary. In this typical New Englander we perceive a relaxation from frivolity of purpose—her constant disposition proves itself sterling.

• To think of Judy is to think of excitement, an even temper, and accomplishments all together. The child in Judy is generally loved, becomes involved in minor scrapes, is witty and has an infectious giggle. The lady in Judy gives lectures, debates, writes, edits and looks the part—tall, poised and pretty! It is this combination of personalities that makes Judy—our Judy.

EDNA MAY REGAL

Bachelor of Arts

26 Ferdinand Place, New Rochelle, N. Y.

• Edna follows two arts—interior decoration and enjoying life. She shakes all worries with three nonchalant shrugs and a quip. Her serious interludes are devoted to the study of design; the rest of her time is spent in fashioning a life completely sans souci. Laughing, carefree Edna—may she find a life without the worries which beset the common man.

• Marion has made a friend of practically every acquaintance. Her easy going disposition and good nature fail to betray her multitude of abilities. Let her carry the ideals of prudence, inculcated in the halls of New Rochelle, and there can be little doubt that the future will witness Marion pinnacled on the very heights of triumph and glory.

- Campus never seemed so secure before. Tranquillity shines from the green of it, sends laughter across it, ripples through Maura's ivy. The Castle tower beams rotundly heavenward, and before it the Campus Cross points a quiet connection between classrooms and Chapel.
- Four autumns we've begun here, made four hibernations, dreamed four springs, faced four other Junes. And although changes on campus have been momentarily startling, and our private evolutions have seemed tremendous, there has always been the serene fact of college, settled and certain. This has given us the pleasantest of liberties—freedom from responsibility. For although we may have realized duty, known small importances, felt the pressure of ambition, we have never had to be completely self-reliant until now.
- Certainly we have heard enough about the unstable world we are officially entering, the world which will daily test our ideals and abilities. No matter how we walk in that world, we welcome this daily test as a chance to substantiate our self-confidence. We are glad to take at last responsibility, purpose and maturity.
- Our last look at campus is a smiling one, although it may be nostalgic and it must have some sorrow in it for each of us. We stop to take one last breath of New Rochelle's deep-rooted calm before we begin. We review a swift impression of the last four years.
- Happiest days of our life? Yes, so far.

• Thirty cents for the first three minutes? All right, Operator. . . .

• Hello, hello, is that you? Oh, Anne, hello! So glad you're back. Tell me all about yourself, how the trip was and everything.

• Another thirty cents, Operator? . . .

• Now it's my turn, Anne: We've had the grandest year. With Kay Dunne as President, and new profs, and different courses, and a tea-room on campus we got off to a flying start. Of course, the first few weeks we could be found downtown consorting with our sisters, who, naturally, are the nicest Freshmen ever to have entered C. N. R. We were anxious to have them become full-fledged inmates of the institution, so everyone rushed madly about, preparing for Investiture. . . . Did you ask about the songs? . . . Well, I'd be glad to tell you, but I can't sit here coining money for Mr. Bell all night. And besides, the spirit of the thing was more important. Candles, and caps and gowns, and the campus under stars . . . but Anne, why is it that, when we receive our Freshmen into our College, our flat, sophomore witticisms are silenced, and everyone is a little quiet and more than a little wistful? Excepting the heart-breaking moments we live through when tassels are turned, I think Investiture brings us more really together than any other ceremony.

- Anyhoo—when that was over we started talking Prom, Prom, and more Prom . . . but only to discover when we slushed Sports Building-wards on the night of December twentieth that everything we had said was gross understatement. Of course, each girl was sure her escort was the catch of the evening, but in their heart of hearts they had to grant me that distinction. . . . Now Anne, don't get me off the track; I'm only giving you this in outline form. . . . Though Mary Dee has long held the unquestioned title of Best Manager of the Most Successful Affairs, that night was her supreme triumph. The decorations and lights were achievements in themselves, and the music—well, it was our Prom orchestra, and even now, when we hear Tommy Dorsey over the radio, we get a far-away look in our eyes.

- Operator, I'll be delighted to have a discussion with you when I'm finished with this one. I'll signal when through.

- Exams caught us on the rebound, but those of us who remained under the tutorage of our Logic professor were heard remarking in hushed voices: "Every day in every way Mr. O'Hare is getting better and better."

- That was the period of the Great Snow, but Spring surprised us once more by being the loveliest in all our lives. With it came the great C. N. R. tradition, Mission Day—and I'll tell you of our part in that when I see you.

- Finals, however, came just as certainly as did Mission Day. Our marks are not out yet, but . . .

- Yes, Operator.

- Oh, Anne, I've got to go, but try to grasp this momentous thought: In a few months we'll be in our Senior year!

- Operator, are you sure you timed that correctly? We couldn't have talked that long!

D U S K H O U R

The darkening time from sunset to the night
Is like the peace I thought I could not know.
I look up hard at one place in the sky
That is no different from the rest, and then
A star is there. I look up from the ground
And everything is sky, calm and subdued
In color to give advantage to the stars
Who have only the night to hold. This one more hour
Between the light and dark is a great kindness;
Stars were born with so much snow and ice
And silver to give that night is not enough.
There is no place for my suspicious mind,
And there is nothing it would want to ask.
Only an answer is needed and my heart
Is always ready to give that.

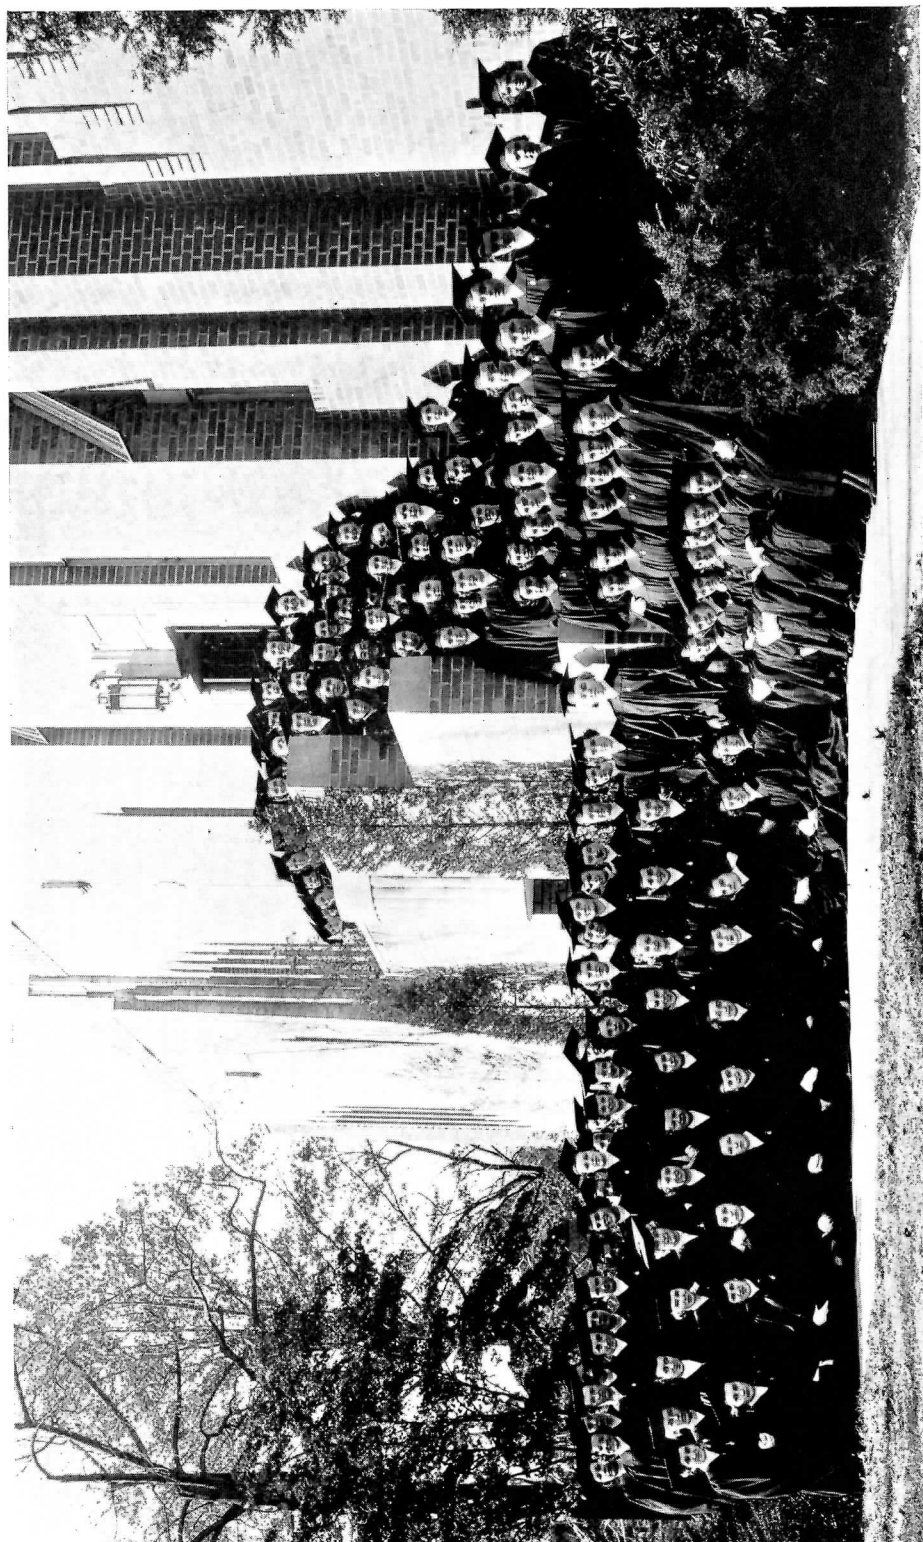

I've heard

That death is of all the most quiet things
The quietest. But death is life when put Beside the hour of dusk. And it is strange
To me that life can give such peace and still
Be life where men still hate, but stranger yet
That peace can come out of a star, a light
Half-known and half-concealed, when the sharp mind
Standing apart and even the heart know well
That peace comes only once and only then
With something less than life and more than dusk.

Dearest Marge:

- Do you know what I have been doing all day? Of course, I've been eating, sleeping and lolling around as usual, but this morning I got real industrious and decided to put my scrap-book in order. Well, you can imagine what a job that was. I hadn't realized what a busy year, and what a happy one, we had last year at school.
- Do you remember when we returned in the Fall, what a hubbub there was greeting everybody, how strange it was to see so many new faces in the Freshman class and how embarrassed, not to mention disgusted, we used to get with ourselves when we'd tell someone we were Freshmen, then catch ourselves and say, "I mean a Sophomore." It was new, this business of being a Sophomore, but it was nice.
- The new tea-room thrilled us, and our class took to haunting it whole-heartedly. It was loads of fun on Wednesday nights last Fall and Winter to collect over there and sing and play bridge. The tournaments we used to have took up most of our week-day evenings from six-thirty to seven-thirty, and I'll always think of the time we serenaded the moon from the tea-room steps as being among the silliest, yet most pleasant, few minutes of my life.

- Then the first Logic class. I was petrified because of all the weird tales I had heard about the course. But it turned out to be not half bad, didn't it—until Mid-years rolled around!

- About the first thing we did as a class last year was to give a party to the new Freshmen in Maura living-room. Betty O'Day was chairman, and it still amuses me to think of how confused we were, running around, attempting to keep the Freshmen happy, at the same time serving refreshments and wondering how under the sun we could save enough for our friends.

- The biggest event was the Sophomore Tea-Dance. Mil Viscount was chairman, remember? But how could you do anything else! The class certainly clicked well on that affair. Everybody cooperated wonderfully, whether it was by selling bids, making black-eyed susans, planning refreshments, or decorating the gym. It was worth all the work, tho'. I think half the college was at Mary Renton's party after the dance, and of course, we're not forgetting the wonderful evening we had—not in a hurry, anyhow! It was a nice little sum we were able to give to the Library Fund, and we were right proud of our Tea-Dance.

- Christmas rolled around faster than ever last year. We decorated baskets for the poor families and were impressed as much as Freshman year by the lovely Dinner Party and the Tableaux. I could hardly believe it when I came back after vacation and exams were on top of us. They weren't much fun, those exams last January, if I remember correctly, but Mother always said that it took sour things to make you appreciate the sweet—or something.

- Anyhow, there was a celebration when the Logic exam was over.

- There seemed to be a lot doing after exams. The Mid-year Play had been put on just before, and the class was well represented by Vi Laemmle and Eileen Boyle. The Long Distance Club's Valentine Tea-Dance and the Mardi Gras came along, and then it was Lent. Pretty Edna Morris was developing plans for Mission Day, and we were hustling around getting votes here and there for the May Queen, arranging the May-Pole dance and doing a hundred and one other things.

- We had another Class Luncheon which was as enjoyable as the one Freshman year, and it seemed no time before we were packing up to go home again for another summer.

- We certainly had a good time last year. It's funny, too, because we had been told by no end of people that Sophomore year was the dullest of them all. I didn't find it dull, did you? There were too many afternoons in the tea-room when we chatted hour on end, too many afternoons at the movies or just spent whiling away time in the ville, too many perfect week-ends, too many Saturdays in the city, too many letters to write, and too much work to do to find school dull. Too many little amusing things happened—incidents that won't go down in the records of achievements for the Class of '38, but which tended, nevertheless, to make Sophomore year unforgettable. For instance, there will always be the little episode of a certain '38-er's dress falling in a tub full of water before the Tea-Dance to make us chuckle. And we'll always think of every Psych. class as being formally opened by a rendition of "Chop-Sticks" on the piano in Science Lecture and by shouting "hello" at the top of our lungs to everyone as she came in. Remember singing "Pals" before going to the Logic exam? They're silly things to look back on now, but they were fun, weren't they? I'll never see Lu Kirby again without visualizing her running around with a flat-iron wrapped in a gorgeous red bandana, as she did for several weeks last winter. She carried it to straighten out that elbow she dislocated skiing—if I have my stories straight.
- There were so many things we were proud of, too, like our successful Tea-Dance, the Sophomore issue of "Tatler" with Kay Fox as editor, and our class president, Evie Werner.
- All this, and much more, came back to me today when I was arranging the scrap-book. There are so many things that a scrap-book doesn't tell you, but one thing leads to another until your brain is fairly buzzing with memories, and I just couldn't resist writing you and getting some of them cleared away—not cleared away exactly, because I'll never forget them but I had to write and remind you of them, too.
- I wonder if you're looking forward to next year as much as I am. To quote Marge Ely, "Now I'm not suggesting, I'm merely mentioning," and hoping sincerely that Junior year will be as much fun as Sophomore.
- 'Till I see you around all of a sudden. . . .

Loads of love,

Peg.

S O N N E T

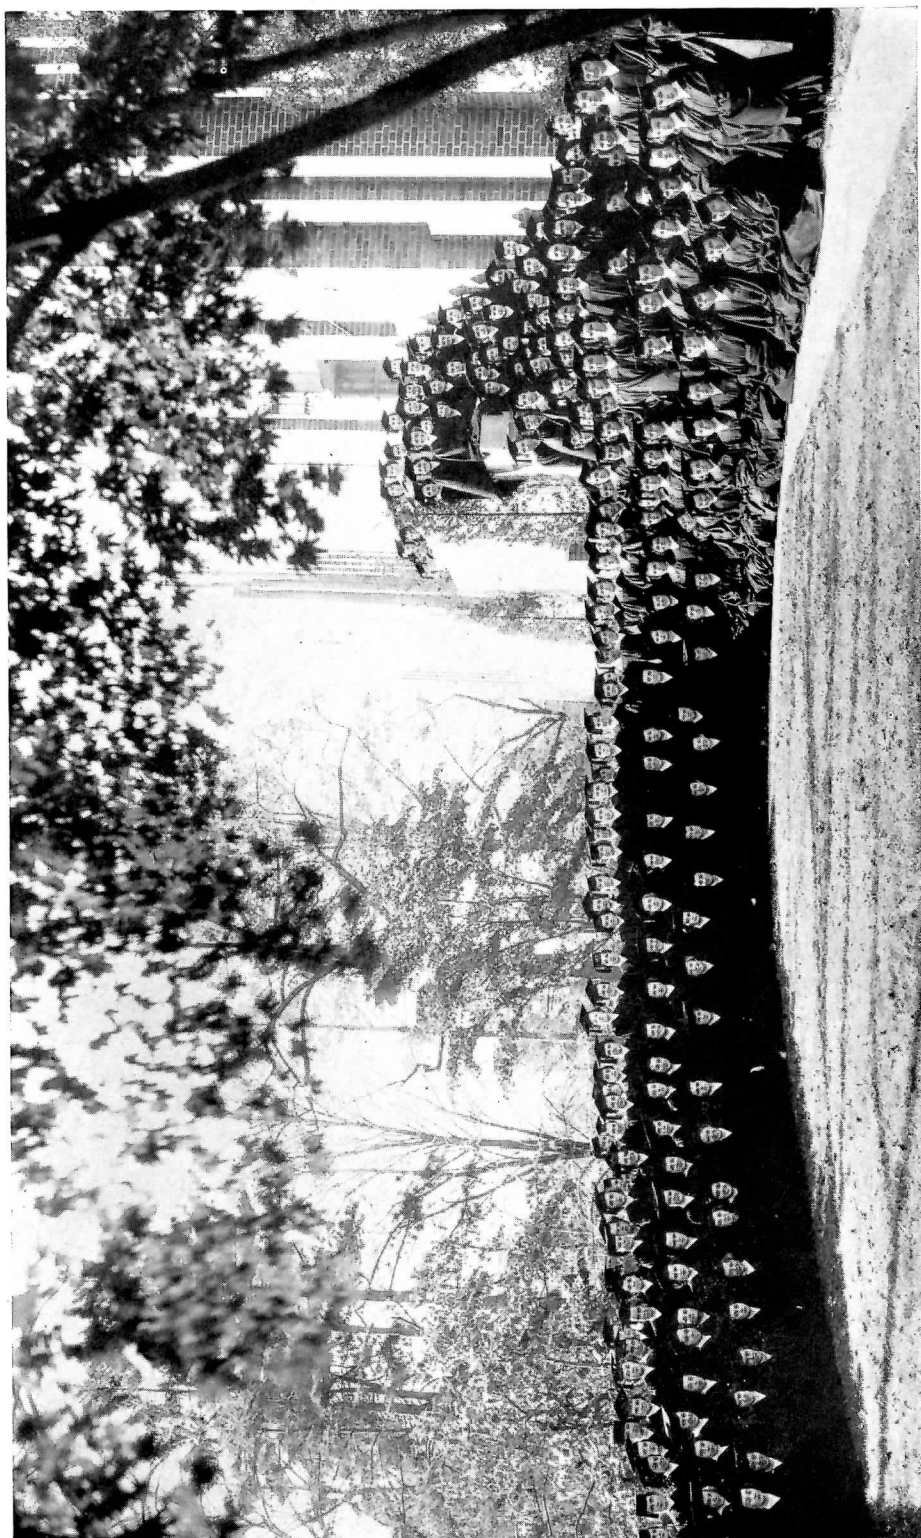

There is a day when sorrow's ruthless knife
Flashes and gleams and thrusts into our hearts.
There is an hour when peace fades from our life
When happiness with downcast look departs.
There is a time when anguish comes, and pain
Swells in an angry rush of pitiless sea
Roaring and tearing, ravaging again
The very atoms of humanity.

But broken hearts are buried. New hearts spring
Out of our souls, from an unknown beyond
All human touch. Until, scarce whispering
Springtime is come, all silent as a pond
Enfolded in some quiet woodland place.
This is awakening, by a good God's grace.

- It was a beautiful afternoon. We Freshmen, however, had no time to appreciate it for this was our first day at college. Oh, we were tired, skeptical and overawed.
- The Juniors, in order to alleviate some of our confusion, gave us many delightful parties, whose informality helped us to orient ourselves more quickly than is characteristic of Freshmen. In speaking of characteristics there is no doubt that the Freshmen's ingenuity in concocting excuses is unsurpassed. We had the determined young lady who on the very first morning just would not exercise her diaphragm in the speech class because of a split lip.
- Elections which always seem to impress new students were carried off with an aplomb worthy of Seniors. Kay MacDonagh as president, and Betty Lynn as vice-president were acclaimed the future leaders by a practically unanimous vote.

- Investiture gave us a new symbol of independence in the form of caps and gowns which we received quite proudly. As we hurried breathlessly through the months the traditions of New Rochelle kept pace with us. Two of the most charming were the wedding, which joined irrevocably Kay Dunne, president and representative of the Junior class to Kay MacDonagh, our president and representative; and the Christmas dinner with its conviviality suddenly subdued so that the quaint toasts might be paid to outstanding students even as the slim green, red flames swayed in graceful tribute to all the girls.

- Indeed after such events as these, we concluded that college was a new, exciting and not too difficult world to live in. Oh—but when the period for mid-year examination came, we hastily corrected ourselves—that everlasting two weeks when we had to cram, pray, scribble and almost fail, called for a drastic revision of opinion. Isn't it strange the conclusions one will reach under stress of exams? Some Freshmen were convinced that jejune signified "drip," that the basic language of English was "the king's English, and if not that then Latin, German, French, Anglo-Saxon," then again the declaration "that words not in reputable use were swearing"—at least we thirty-niners had ideas.

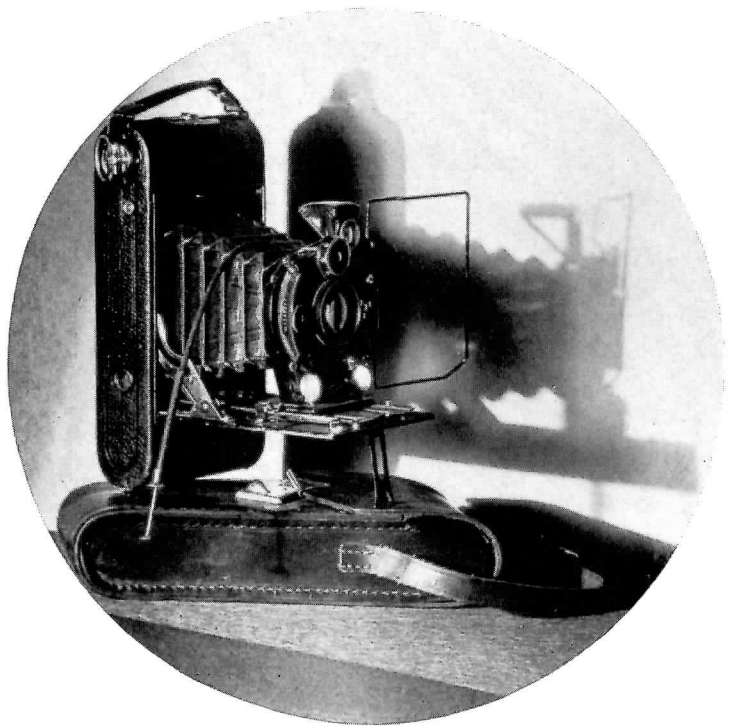

- Contemporary with the crocuses and hyacinths, Freshmen blossomed forth as custodians of multi-color booths on Mission Day. Some were privileged to be in the Court of the May Queen, a procession which would enchant even the most prosaic mind.

- Suddenly the time had come to turn our tassels ever so little to the right. To cover a rather dewy, reminiscent thought we all sang lustily "where oh where are the verdant Freshmen"; if we could not be found, at least we could be heard.

- Last of all we have the eulogy of the Freshman class to their alma mater summarized in the words of an excited young lady "Isn't college . . . Isn't college?" "Yes, isn't it," agreed her companion.

"ANNIE LAURIE"

- Flaunting her dramatic skirts in the face of a Shakespearean tradition that demanded a yearly presentation of one of the plays of that worthy Bard, the dramatic society, Props and Paint, for the first time (at least to the knowledge of this reviewer) in her highly successful career, presented in January of this year, "Annie Laurie," the work of a contemporary playwright.
- To use theatre parlance: all box-office records for previous performances were broken. In their best bibs and tuckers, a highly receptive audience (which, incidentally, occupied every available bit of space in Chidwick auditorium) showed their appreciation of Wall Spens' little drama most enthusiastically.
- The play, deriving its theme from the ballad of the same name, is one of Scottish feudal strife, of lovers separated by war and family hatred, and of their final union, together with the reconciliation of clan enemies.
- It is not the function, nor indeed would it be possible for this particular critic to cite any special performance as outstanding. There were too many excellent portrayals, giving evidence of complete sympathy with the part in question, to warrant that.
- Not the least portion of the acclaim for this splendid presentation, is due Miss Miriam Little Simons, instructor in speech, and dramatic coach at the college, whose zealous efforts have enabled her to chalk up another mark for herself on the credit side of the histrionic ledger.
- It is our hope that henceforth Mr. Shakespeare will not be completely overlooked. We feel this rest was due him; and that by the sometime-presentation of the plays of more recent authors, a sincerer appreciation of his works will be fostered in an ever-increasing theatre audience.

CAMPUS CLUBS OF THE FUTURE

- As we bid farewell to the campus clubs of today and to their members, we look forward and muse on those of tomorrow, the tomorrow of twenty or twenty-five years from now, the tomorrow, possibly, when our daughters will be enrolled in those future college clubs.
- Will they have improved and changed so that we will fail to recognize them? Will they so impress us with their ultra-modern and futuristic wonders that we will wish to change places with the next generation? Or, rather, will they amuse us and recall to mind the social activities of grandmother's or even great grandmother's day?
- We hear on all sides that this civilization is doomed and that men will eventually revert to barbarous ways. Should the change come gradually rather than with a cataclysmic crash, we of thirty-six might indeed find our daughters' amusements old-fashioned or mid-victorian, and not at all exciting.
- The reign of the knitting needle has already begun and we fear that the embroidery needle comes fast upon its heels. Perhaps the "genteel" occupations of knitting and sewing will be incorporated into an organized extra-curricular activity similar to the Ladies Aid Societies of the mauve decade. A campus club for "bigger and better knitters and sewers" would indeed be novel.
- And were time to turn back more quickly, think what we might find! A colonial or puritanical spirit might produce a "Colonial Cap-Setters Club," a society dedicated to the fine art of procuring a husband in a demure and subtle way opposed to the "knock-down-drag-'em-out" tactics of this glorious leap-year of thirty-six. And what a picture of a club of the Restoration Period can be conjured up. Imagine a club of "Languishing Lovers" with try-outs designed to test one's ability to languish becomingly and to faint enchantingly!
- Of course, if men should return to the stone-age within the next quarter of a century, there would be little hope for campus clubs of any type. They would lapse into the past along with automobiles and radios, steam-heat and electric light. Were such a thing to happen, the campus, and even the college itself, would have to go. We feel that such a condition would be deplorable for our children, for we are grown wiser and sadder by pondering the momentous question, "What will life be away from college and our campus clubs?"

—Grace E. Dietz, '36

Not the least of collegiate activities are athletics. An architecturally beautiful Sports Building providing a pool, basketball courts, sun room, and restful lounge is the center of a program carried on by an enthusiastic Athletic Association.

BASKETBALL HISTORY OF 1936

- Back in Freshman year, with the announcement of basketball tryouts, a crowd of excited, hopeful aspirants turned out. Interest was high; competition keen and eagerly we awaited the selection of the lucky "cream of the crop." The decision was made and 1936 started off its court career represented by a team captained by Frances Leamy, managed by Winifred Walsh and having as its members: Natalie Briggs, Laurette Gleason, Evelyn Leahy, Constance Markey, Florence Medon, Mercedes Ormston, Grace Reeves and Vivian Volk.
- As Helen Brennan, class president, unfurled our new class banner at the first game, the Freshman team went into action against their Junior sisters. They emerged victorious and hopefully looked forward to their meeting with the Seniors. In this next contest, '36 put up a stiff battle but the combination of Florence Walsh and Irene Broderick backed by their hard-fighting team proved too much and the Freshmen went down in defeat. Then came the Sophomore game, also unsuccessful. For this year the Freshmen were out of the running and the Meet found Seniors and Sophomores competing, with Seniors having the winning score.
- Sophomore year rolled around and the opening game found the same team taking the floor with the exception of Jane Callaghan and Kathryn Daly who replaced Vivian Volk and Mercedes Ormston. This year also saw two of our classmates given positions on the varsity—Natalie Briggs, as guard, and Florence Medon, forward. The Sophomores were out to win and their first two opponents, the Juniors and the Freshmen, found that 1936 meant business. Not only did they win, but they won by indisputable majority.
- This gave '36 a chance in the Meet and decked out in green and white middies, they met the Juniors in a fight-to-the-finish battle and finally carried off the honors by the very close score of 16-15. Leamy and McCallester were high scorers of the evening.

- Junior year changed the basketball personnel but slightly. Mary Norton and Aileen Price were given the positions left vacant by Grace Reeves and Laurette Gleeson. With the past year's record to encourage them, '36 set the Meet as their goal. The season started successfully with a defeat of the Freshmen. The Junior-Sophomore game followed with the Juniors still on the winning end. Then came the Junior-Senior game and '35, out for their last opportunity for revenge, made good their threat and beat the Juniors in the last few minutes of play by the narrow margin of 18-16. But 1936 was once more entered in the Meet. This time we faced our Sister class and for the first time in ten years, a Freshman team came through to win the Meet. It was a keen, close battle and in the opinion of Mrs. Ostertag "the outstanding game she has seen played on the New Rochelle court."

- Senior year brought radical changes in the line-up. Of the original team only Briggs, Leamy and Markey remained. Norton and Price still retained their positions and Claire Stopford, Rosemary Kenedy and Anne Lennon were selected to complete the team.

- In the first game, '36 met the Freshmen and the final score was a tie. Then, once more, our sister class proved stronger and the Sophomore-Senior game ended in victory for the former. The next clash was with the undefeated team of '37. The Seniors went into the game determined to make this, their last appearance, a victorious one. Though 1936 played hard, the final whistle blew with the Juniors far in the lead. Having ended a career, whose record was one of which to be proud, '36 withdrew from the court leaving the Junior and Freshman teams to fight it out for the Meet championship.

DOWN THE ATHLETIC YEARS WITH '36

CHAPTER 1

● It was the fall of '32 and the class of '36 was experiencing its first October at New Rochelle. Excitement prevailed everywhere. And down in the Sports Building the same state of confusion reigned. Mrs. Ostertag had called for try-outs for the Freshman basketball team. Many tried out and somehow all managed to weather the fatiguing hour of scrimmage through which they were put. Athletics were in full stride for the Frosh. Leahy, Reeves, Markey, Briggs, Gleeson, Medon, Ormston and Leamy were chosen to represent their class on the court. Leamy was elected to captain the mob and Winnie Walsh to manage them, a rather impossible job. She succeeded very well at it, however, and the initial game went to '36 when they defeated their sister class 22-19. Lowerclass Sports Day was the next event on the calendar and its arrival found supporters of the four classes trekking to the gym. It was a closely-fought battle with '36 bowing to the more superior Sophs at the end of the day. The high scorers for the events were Jane Stretch, Evelyn Leahy, Mary McGuire and Helen Brennan, the latter winning a first place for her class in personal performance. In the second basketball game, the Frosh bowed to the Seniors 29-21. Briggs, Leahy, and Leamy were outstanding but were unable to surpass the shooting ability of Florence Walsh, '33. The swimming team to represent the green and white was made up of Rogers, Markey, Reeves, Leahy, Kennedy, Nehrbras, Stretch, Utting, Daly, Griffin, Brennan, Briggs, Volk and Leamy. Stretch captained the outfit and they won third place in the Meet, with Markey and Stretch leading. Field Day soon rolled around and resulted rather drastically for '36 for they were unable to place in the events for the day. The annual tennis tournament was won in the Freshman class by Elsie Oberle. One chapter of the athletic history of '36 was over but before the records were entirely closed upon it, the A. A. banquet was held in the Sports Building. Officers for the coming year were installed and Natalie Briggs was sworn in as the new secretary. Freshman year was over and the '36-ers retired from the restful haunts of the gym, taking with them their numerous sore muscles and stiff joints, and happy in the thought that there would be a few months respite from these various activities.

CHAPTER 2

● Another October rolled around. The class of '36, Sophomores now, fit after a summer of swimming, tennis and golf returned again to the friendly atmosphere of the gym. The swimming team for '33-'34 was chosen and M. O'Connell, C. Stopford and J. Dodge were added to the original team. They practised hard and carried off third place in the Meet. Fran Leamy and Connie Markey were elected to captain and manage the basketball outfit. In the initial game of the year, the team defeated the Juniors 32-8. Two Sophs, N. Briggs and F. Medon, made the Varsity. Once again, activities started for the lowerclass Sports Night. Many practises were held by both teams but from the initial event of the night the Frosh were doomed to defeat by the resolute '36. The final score found the latter leading 95-70, having captured five out of six events, an overwhelming victory. Dot Clifford gained first place for her class in personal performance. Basketball, baseball, handball and volleyball were also won by the Sophs. The high scorers for the events were Tucker, Briggs, Daly, McGuire, Clifford, Norton, Byrne, Markey and Leamy. The final meet game in basketball finally arrived. It was a bitter, closely-fought game throughout. The score wavered from one side to the other and it was anybody's basketball victory until the final whistle blew. The Sophs shut out their opponents by one point, the final score showing 16-15. The entire team played brilliantly, no one girl was outstanding, but all worked together as a perfect machine. In the annual swimming meet, second place went to the Sophs after some beautiful swimming and diving on the part of Stretch and Kennedy of the green and white. These indoor sports were at an end with the approach of spring and the months of April and May found the devotees of the gym pursuing their activities outside. Field Day came around and with it the overwhelming defeat of the Sophs by the Frosh. The year, now ended, had been even more successful than the initial one. Balls, bats, and gym suits were again confined to the moth balls for the summer months. Last echoes were heard around the gym, and then—all was silent. Summer had come.

CHAPTER 3

• Natalie Briggs, our new president, presided at the first meeting of A. A. in October and soon thereafter sports began again. Mary Norton was added to the basketball team of '36, and Edna Davis found a place on the baseball nine. Connie Markey was elected to captain the former and Mary Norton the latter. In the initial game of the year, Markey led her team to a victorious game over the new Frosh. The shooting of Callaghan and Leamy was consistent and accurate. In the second interclass basketball game of the year, the green and white was again victorious, defeating the Sophs, 37-31. That year also found three members of '36 on the Varsity: Leahy, Briggs and Leamy. In the third basketball encounter, the Seniors snapped the two-year string of Junior victories when they defeated the latter team in a terrific battle that ended 18-16. This defeat didn't effect the chances of the Juniors playing in the Meet, however, and this game found them opposing the Sophs. The accurate shooting of the Soph forward outdid anything put forward by the Junior shooting section and led her team to victory with the final score 16-11. Basketball was over for another year. Attention turned to the Swim Meet in which the Juniors received only a third place, Stretch again being high scorer. At the annual A. A. banquet, N. Briggs was sworn in as custodian of the organization for the year '35-'36. College letter sweaters were awarded to six Juniors: Briggs, Daly, Kennedy, Leahy, Norton and Leamy. It had been a grand year; it had its ups and downs as any year. Now it was over and judging from the tears which Mrs. Ostertag's banquet address evoked, everyone was just a bit sorry.

CHAPTER 4

● October of 1935! The last chapter of the athletic history of '36 was about to be completed. The initial basketball game found the green and white, Seniors at last, opposing the Frosh. A lot was expected of this new team but '36 wasn't too worried. The Senior team, as it trotted out upon the floor for this game, led by Captain Markey, was marked by the loss of Leahy and Daly, veteran centers, and Callaghan and Medon, forwards of the first three years. Rosemary Kenedy, Claire Stopford and Anne Lennon were new material, however, so the team had high hopes. These hopes soon vanished when a few minutes play brought home the realization that this Freshman outfit wasn't any team with which to fool. The tired, lagging steps of '36 quickened a bit and their pride was saved when the score ended in a tie. In the double-header game in January, things began to take on a hopeless aspect when the hard-fighting Sophs defeated the Seniors 13-8. The spirit and old-time habit of clicking together seemed to be lacking on the Senior team. Age seemed beginning to tell on them! They no longer whipped around the court, and their faces began to take on a placid, resigned aspect. The general Sports Night, to replace the Upperclass Day, brought back a lot of the old-time fervor of the classes. Through the efforts of Dot Clifford, '36 received a first place in personal performance. Dot was superb in the event winning it by the deliberate, smooth pace which she maintained throughout. The Seniors also placed second in the Mascot, and third in Games and Committee work but these placements weren't sufficient to carry them through and they emerged 11 points behind the winning Junior team. There was but one more basketball game left for '36 to play, and that with the team that boasted the shooting of Madge Cassidy, Angela Vitale and Rita Frey. What more need be said? The Seniors were conquered after a game fight and the athletic history of '36 came to a close. A knowledge of successful swimming meets and victorious interclass games remains to buoy up the spirits of those who have taken an active participation in these events; but more than that, outside of these extraneous thoughts of games well-played or meets well-swum—aside from these will remain a sense of good sportsmanship and fair play, which could have been imbued only by four years close contact with athletics and Mrs. Ostertag. It is with this thought that they bid adieu to the familiar sights of the Sports Building and to her who has made it a place of such delightful memories, and turn their steps away, a bit falteringly perhaps, but with heads held high.

—Frances R. Leamy, '36

"Feature that, if you can." We tried it and it didn't work, so with many humble bows to the right and to the left we offer to our public, sitting with bated breath, a directory of school life, and more—yea, a prophet sees our students twenty years from now.

GRADUATION—We don't like to think about it.

GYM—To some—a torture chamber. To others, like Fran Leamy, the gilt edge on college life.

HISTORY—For the sake of Freshmen, we'll omit anything except mention of this.

HOME-SICKNESS—Common Freshman malady.

HONORS—A title imposed, at graduation, upon those whose most vivid memories will be of the library and classrooms.

HOPE—A Senior's only stimulant.

HYSTERICIS—A roommate's defensive.

INFIRMARY—A haven of the weary. A harbor for exam-ridden derelicts.

INVESTITURE—The ceremony which leaves a lasting memory of our Freshman year. We really felt as though we belonged after that.

JOB—A strict silence should be maintained while the Seniors concentrate on this one.

JUNIOR—One who knows a little more than a Sophomore, but not quite as much as a Senior.

KNITTING—An incurable habit peculiar to members of the Knit-Wit Clubbe.

LECTURE—A class in correspondence.

LETTERS—If you're a good answerer, you'll get them.

LIBRARY—Favorite haunt of book-worms.

LIGHTS—(See 10 o'clock).

LITTLE AUDREY—New Rochelle's favorite topic of conversation.

LOGIC—Wasn't that something about Genus and Species and Syllogisms that brightened up Sophomore year?

MAJOR (not a military title)—Selected in Freshman year, studied enthusiastically in Sophomore year, changed in Junior year, and accepted resignedly in Senior year.

MAN—A rare kind of animal who (our scouts have reported) has been seen at the very best New Rochelle functions, but whose presence on ordinary occasions creates a mild furor among otherwise sedate young ladies of the same institution.

MAY-QUEEN—"Sweetness and Light": New Rochelle version.

MENAGERIE—Gold-fish and cats.

MINOR—We struggle almost as much with this as with our major.

MISSION DAY—By setting aside this day every year, New Rochelle "tops" all contributions to the mission-funds.

ENCYCLOPAEDIA NEW ROCHELL - ICA—Continued

MOVIES—A college girl's only view of the outside world between week-ends.

"MUSIC GOES 'ROUND AND 'ROUND"—The extent of the roommate's repertoire.

NAIVETE—Now that we know Mary Galvin, we wouldn't mind in the least being called naive.

NEW ROCHELLE—Three guesses, the first two don't count.

NOTEBOOK—A large book containing the ramblings of a student's subconscious mind.

ORIGINALITY—"Annales" owed it to the capable editorship of Marie Reiser.

PAGEANT—A memorable one was held to celebrate the four hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Ursuline Order.

PHILOSOPHY—Something to look forward to after completing a course in Logic.

PHOOEY—Password to the Biology Lab.

POOL—Wherein we drown our sorrows and attain a new outlook on life.

POST-OFFICE—It could tell the story of one's life.

PREFERENCES—'36 shows it most decidedly in acclaiming:

Alice Touhey as best-dressed
Kay Gillen as most literary
Marie Bohan as most attractive
Elizabeth as most intellectual . . . and
Gertrude Finnegan as most likely to succeed.

PRESIDENT — Helen McDonough, New Rochelle's choice. Elected the most popular girl on campus.

PRIVILEGE—An indefinable something enjoyed by that highest form of campus life, the Senior.

PROFESSOR—It seems that we have to have them when we go to college.

PROM—The social event of about four hours' duration, which furnishes the main topic of conversation for Junior year.

PROPS AND PAINT—The try-outs are gruelling, but Florence Medon proves that it has a distinction quite unlike any other campus organization.

PUNS—Peggy Fenner has no use for them, but we think her rare good-humor is exceeded only by her helpfulness.

QUARTERLY—(a) The intellectual publication for those with literary leanings.

(b) Where pennies become calories.

PLACE: University of New Rochelle campus

TIME: June 4, 1956

OCCASION: Reunion of the Class of 1936

In Foundress Hall, the class has assembled under the chairmanship of Mrs. Stanislaus Smith (Peg Fenner) and the members are clamoring for the surprise that has been promised to them. Peg gives Marie Reiser, LL.D., the floor, announcing that Marie has recently edited a "Who's Who of the Class of 1936." When she raises the volume, there are murmurs of admiration as the audience views a green and white bound volume, resembling the never-to-be-forgotten "Annales."

Helen McDonough Jones, chosen to read the masterpiece, proceeds:

LILLIAN ALAIMO: Awarded the Pulitzer Prize of 1946 for scientific research; also discovered the ultra green and white ray.

ROSANNE ALLIGER: Author of fifty volume treatise on the Value of Esthetic Teaching of History in our schools.

RITA ARMSTRONG: Member of the United States Senate in 1948; nominee of forthcoming governmental election in New Jersey.

ISABEL BASANTA: Foundress of the Economic Library of the United States and President of the national economic society, Omega Kappa Gamma Pi Beta.

VIRGINIA BASTIAN: Official hostess of the class and author of syndicated articles on interior decoration.

ELENA BIANCHI: Editor of Good Housekeeping Magazine.

NANCY BIRRITELLA: Famous model for George (Titian painter) Armalissimo.

MARIE BOHAN: Inventor of M. B. cosmetics and designer of raccoon scarves.

CLAIRE BOLAND: Exponent of the Sl-ch-s-db stitch in knitting.

FRANCES BOSSUET: Chairman of the International Chairmen's Organization of North and South America, Europe and Australia.

DOROTHY M. BRENNAN: Foundress of a Nursery School for the children of her busy classmates.

HELEN BRENNAN: First secretary of the National Philosophic Society.

ELVIRA BRIA: Member of the French Academy.

NATALIE BRIGGS: Retainer of forty-four Olympic records in swimming.

MARIE BURKE: President of the Giants' Society of America.

MARIE LOUISE BYRNES: Radio entertainer on the "Chatty Hour."

JANE CALLAGHAN: Professor of Ethics at Goucher and holder of Amateur Golf Championship of America for twenty years.

MARGARET CHRISTOPH: Dietitian at the University of New Rochelle.

DOROTHY CLIFFORD: University lecturer on "Philosophy in these—our times."

VERONICA COLEMAN: Member of the supreme council of the Housewives of America.

MARY T. CONNOLLY: President of Metaphysical Poets Society.

MARION CONNOR: Mother of the M. C. Baseball team, all of whom graduated from Notre Dame.

MARGARET CRAP: Greatest shareholder in Mademoiselle Pegee's Chapeaus.

LILLIAN CURRAN: Inventor of the Curran Curlicue Chirography.

KATHRYN DALY: Foremost Horsewoman in the country.

EDNA DAVIS: Head of the language department at the University of Seville.

MARGARET DELANEY: Speaker of the House of Representatives.

JANE DODGE: Copy Editor of the "Times" and author of "It Did Happen Here."

GRACE DIETZ: America's favorite radio announcer and histrionic star.

ELVIRA DOWELL: Head of the History Department of U. N. R.

EILEEN DUGLISS: Editor of the "Times" and protagonist of women's rights in Mesopotamia.

ELIZABETH DUNNIGAN: Alice Touhey's press agent and Lil Curran's collaborator.

JOSEPHINE DUTTO: Renowned oil painter and honorary member of the Bulgarian Royal Arts Society.

JEANNETTE EDWARDS: President of the Pan-American Society.

DOROTHY ENSIGN: Head Statistical expert of the law firm of Thomson and Utting.

MERCEDES FERRER: Governor of Porto Rico; former head of History in the University of Jayteef.

PRISCILLA FENNER: Head of the Sociology Commission which effected the law prohibiting the giving of exams on the second Thursday.

GERTRUDE FINNEGAN: President of Phi Beta Kappa and superintendent of the LOCO Institution at which many of her friends board.

MARY FITZSIMONS: Editor of the Catholic Worker and dramatic critic on the "Times."

MARY FOLEY: Editor of the New Yorker.

JULIA FOODY: Foundress of the Historical Museum of New Haven.

ELEANOR FRAWLEY: Society matron, whose endorsement sells our cold creams and cosmetics.

FLORENCE FRIEDMAN: Girl whose lovely hair started the rage for "Natural Titians."

MARY E. GALVIN: Official hostess at the White House and mother of the Attorney General.

MARY GANNON: Professor of Philosophy at Mount St. Vincent.

- FLORENCE MEDON: Broadway's famous "character" star.

"OH-H-H-H, DOCTOR! IT'S WONDERFUL!"

● The yearbook disease (publicandum annualis) is a periodic affliction in all of our best schools. ● Early symptoms: a flurry of activity, shortened breath, contracts before the eyes, a shaky signature with an empty feeling in the pit of the stomach after signing. ● First stage: staff assignments, liberal promises of assistance, accompanied by a feeling of security. (Look out for this false peace—ever hear of the lull before the storm?) ● Second stage: feverish activity, sleepless nights, muttering under the breath, eyes gleaming wildly, hair on end. ● Third or virulent stage: utter frenzy, accompanied by frothing at the mouth and tearing the hair. Approach with caution, as patient is in no mood to be trifled with. At this point patient may be heard retorting to critics: "I hope all your children will be yearbook editors!" ● Ol' Doc B.J.H. has never isolated the germ of yearbook disease, but he's known all over the country for his wonderful bedside manner. His old homely prescription ("let me do all the doctorin' ") always prevents the last and deadliest stage: editorial insanity, aggravated by separate printer and engraver. He laughs at specialists: "A feller told me one time, he sez 'A specialist is a kind of a man that knows more and more about less and less,' 'n' durned if he ain't right." ● Two of the doc's best patients this year are Marie Reiser and Elizabeth Mary Otis. The ANNALES is finished, and they're not only alive but in the best of health. ● Verbum sapientiae satis est—which, freely translated, means "Let that be a lesson to you."

- HELEN WERNER: Mother of the six Republicans who have made themselves Governors of Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Montana and Utah.
- MARION WHITE: America's Good-Will Ambassador to all recalcitrant countries.

When Helen finished the book, there were raving cheers for the class of 1936, as the familiar green and white banner was elevated. To the strains of "It's the dearest college," the assembly broke up in chattering groups—just like in the days of 1932-1936.

—Elizabeth Mary Otis, '36

HISTORICAL FACT

September 1932 to June 1936

- We intended to say "Down the years with '36" but we found that our fine little athletic writer-upper had already used the expression, so we dropped the idea (courtesy Southern Pacific Railway. No ad).

- 'Way back in September, 1932 there arrived at our sacred portals of learning (hear! hear!) a class unprecedented in wisdom, beauty, virtue and all that is good. To these were given the holy trust: to carry on the glorious old traditions of the blue and white—and the green and white bestowed upon us by an unwary class of '32, a class which didn't realize the heights to which these modest '36ers would rise.

- A few weeks convinced us—and the college, too. Helen Brennan, ably assisted by Betty Fitzpatrick (since migrated to other parts), might be seen at any hour of the day or night resignedly extricating foolish frosh from any number of minor adventures. But the true depth of the Freshman mind was revealed when a stately banner appeared in the Sports Building. 'Twas a shield of honor against a background of green (signifying the verdant quality). To add to the glory of Freshman year, there was always the girl who tossed glasses of water about. Came June and we wept.

- Came September and we laughed 'cause we knew we weren't Freshmen any more. It was a great tax on the minds of the Sophomores to assume true sophomoric dignity, and hard as we tried, we didn't seem to succeed, for people invariably took us for Freshmen anyway. Helen McDonough managed to rule the unruly, but we could always depend upon Peggy Fenner to cause an upheaval with one of her inimitable puns (she repudiates them now). Sophomore year was just one of those things.

- Then, behold! we were Juniors and upperclassmen with Freshman sisters about whom to worry. At least we hoped we'd worry, but they never fell into the pits which had beset our paths. Ah, Freshmen have changed since we first started wide-eyed and innocent about the campus. And such lovely words of advice were wasted! Peggy must have given them a very informative and instructive little talk when she welcomed them for us. Of course, we could always think "Junior Prom" which might be summarized in the words:

- Weeks of worry, ten dollars spent.
- To prance in the gym to your heart's content.
- You hope.

That was the year Eileen Dugliss and Aileen Price edited our incomparable weekly purveyor of news—ye Tatler. Tatler, mind you, seeks not nor does it publish scandal.

- September, 1935 saw the class of '36 rise to its full grandeur. Helen McDonough became college president, to lead us through the three-times daily ritual. Peggy Fenner was also capable of expediting matters. Theora Knoop conducted Sodality. Eileen Dugliss retained her hold upon the journalistic life and wielded the power of the press to the great advantage of the unintelligent masses. Kay Gillen (alias Carlotta Swinburne) edited Quarterly, that elite of literary elites. Marie Reisert turned to historical fact and record—result: the "Annales." Natalie Briggs did handstands trying to supervise A. A.

- It was a great shock to have a Freshman hold a door for us. Our undying gratitude to that Maura Freshman who seemed to make opening doors for Seniors her life-work.

- Just as we were becoming acclimated to the rarified air which Seniors breathe, we find ourselves awakening with a rude jolt—and we stand, diplomas in hand, facing a disinterested and cynical world.

—Marie Reisert

CLASS WILL

College of New Rochelle
New Rochelle, New York
June 3, 1936

• We, the class of 1936, having happily graduated from the College of New Rochelle and being, to all outward appearances, of sane mind and healthy body, do on this third day of June, nineteen hundred and thirty-six bequeath to our esteemed friends and successors the following:

- To Monsignor Crowley—our sincere admiration of all that he has done for the college.
- To Mother Ignatius—our love and gratitude and the hope that we may ever live up to the principles and ideals which her efforts have instilled in us.
- To Mother Loyola—our appreciation and love for her untiring endeavors in our behalf.
- To Father White—we say "thank you" for giving us Ethics classes that were an enjoyment.
- To the faculty in general—our amazement at the patience and perseverance which you have shown.
- To the next inhabitant of Room 7, Maura, we bequeath Helen McDonough's poise, popularity and sincerity.
- To the next Senior president, we leave Peg Fenner's inimitable wit, congeniality and habit of closing windows in the morning.
- To the class of 1937, we bequeath the legendary Senior stairs.
- To the class of 1938, those incoming little sisters and our best wishes for a bigger and better Junior Prom.
- To the class of 1939, a year of true Sophomoric bliss with its habitual laughter and gaiety.
- To the class of 1940—those Freshmen whom we will never know—the hope that their four years at New Rochelle will be as worthwhile and happy as ours have been.
- To the student body in general, we leave a petition for shorter exams, later hours and a ride in Father White's car.
- To Geraldine Foster, we bequeath Virginia McDonough's sophistication.
- To Marge Ely, with the hope that she will burn it forever, Marie Reisert's obnoxious brown hat with a bit of her originality "topping" it off.
- To Lucy Kirby, a bit of Theora Knoop's dignity.
- To Eileen Quinn, Kay Laressy's troublesome history exams.
- To Helene Pecheux, Fran Bossuet's infectious giggle.
- To Elaine Lawrence, Alice Touhey's niche in the Hall of Fame, as the best-dressed Senior.
- To Alice Fitzgerald, Fran Leamy's athletic ability with those well-known orange socks thrown in.
- To Kay MacDonagh, we leave Muriel Paige's serious nature and the hope that she will carry on the MacDonagh name.
- And last, but far from least, to Anne, we leave our love and gratitude for her attention and service during our college years.

(Signed) The Class of 1936
—Frances Rose Leamy

IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS

Time: 2036 A.D.

Place: University of New Rochelle campus.

- "Itchy, so help me, I've never heard a worse exam! They just get more horrible . . ."
- "Oh, stop it, Goo! Suppose you were living a hundred years ago when times were really bad! At least, we can lie in bed in the morning and take our exams by remote control. Those poor people actually had to walk into an exam room—which reminds me—the '36 Museum is open this afternoon. Suppose we stop in?"
- The girls approach a green and white brick building, lettered 1936, on which a plaque sets forth the following:
 - ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO, THERE GRADUATED FROM OUR YOUNG INSTITUTION A CLASS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-THREE GIRLS WHO NOT ONLY LIVED AND KNEW HISTORY, BUT ACTUALLY MADE IT.
 - IT IS TO THEM IN RECOGNITION OF THE LIFE, SPIRIT, AND LOVE WITH WHICH THEY ENDOWED NEW ROCHELLE THAT THIS MUSEUM HAS BEEN ERECTED. MAY THEIR MEMORY LONG REMAIN AS ONE OF THE FINEST TREASURES OF NEW ROCHELLE.
- In the vestibule, a portly guard, who answers to the name of Gus the Third, points out photographic representations of the big moments of the class of 1936. On one side, the girls view the laurels of the 1934 Meet; the Junior Prom and the Daisy Chain; Irene Vaughan as May Queen; Gertrude Finnegan and Rita Armstrong in a victorious forensic duel with Cambridge University; Eileen Dugliss's article in "America," and numerous others.
- The walls of the central room are hung with photographs of girls, under which each girl's activities before and after graduation are recounted. Overshadowing the room is a bright green and white banner, announcing 1936 as part of the Blue and White family of C. N. R.
- As the girls step into the room, a feeling of strangeness possesses them, and, gazing starry-eyed, they sense one hundred years slipping away. Animation fills the air.
- Itchy and Goo watch a tall laughing man, with Roman collar and cassock, surrounded by a group. Suddenly, a voice sounds, "But Father, when I am forty-five, I intend to be fascinating." And she was voted the most naive member of 1936.
- A roar rents the place. A group of girls sitting in the tea room ask, "Do you suppose she has any mirrors in her house? How can she kid herself into thinking that she's beautiful?" The quick enjoinder, "Now, girls, please cast no reflections," uttered with the accompaniment of twinkling eyes, again convulses the group. (Itchy murmurs, "She's the wittiest.")
- Fun and camaraderie pervade the room as the girls congregate in small parties. In one, a tall serious individual is demanding the answer to a question about impeachment which evokes the bright retort, "The Senate declared the Supreme Court unconstitutional, Dr. Farrell." However, the rest perceive the marks of age and worry on the face of the girl, and shake their heads, "Well, she's the editor of the yearbook."
- Likewise, another girl takes the center of the floor. "Please, Rosie, do that imitation again." She does and it is unforgettable.

- "Now, girls," from a tall gentleman (with an obviously new brief case—a present from his mother for the feast of Thomas Aquinas) "you will admit that the soul permeates the whole body. Well, what happens to the soul in your arm, when your arm's cut off?" "It goes to heaven and waits for the rest," from the aforesaid imitator.

- The same gentleman is holding a session in Ontology, with the class, and startles one member by the query, "How do angels know? How do you know?" Quickly, he is answered, "I don't know. I'm No Angel."

- The scene changes to Maura Dining Room. At a table, healthy young appetites are taking their toll of Marge Kennedy's favorite dessert, ice cream.

- Now, the most polished of Oxonian accents reminds the assemblage—"Things are not quite out of the first drawer."

- Another tall, laughing man, with Roman collar, is deeply interested in Communism, Socialism and Hitler. "Remember, girls, you can count the Communists by their noses"—remarks like this, echoed by a hearty chuckle make classes really enjoyable.

- In the Sports Building, the class of 1936 stands breathless, for victory in the Swimming Meet is at stake. Nat Briggs, the last word in things athletic, valiantly essays a backstroke which seems to strike her helpless. Even her classmates have to laugh at Nat's floundering in the pool. But she still remains a swell sport.

- In Tatler office, a dark curly head and a blonde one are bent over pages of copy. It is no time for the printer to arrive, and, of course, he does. Flashing brown eyes meet twinkling blue ones as they demand GAUTY HAND TOOLED TYPE in the next issue. Now, GAUTY HAND TOOLED TYPE is rare—but rarer still—the printer never heard about it. Score up for Eileen and Aileen!

- "Annales" elections have just taken place. The excited Business Manager is whisked away by friends for a little sustenance. In a Bronxville Tea Room, the waitress asks, "What did you get?" "Business Manager," is the reply.

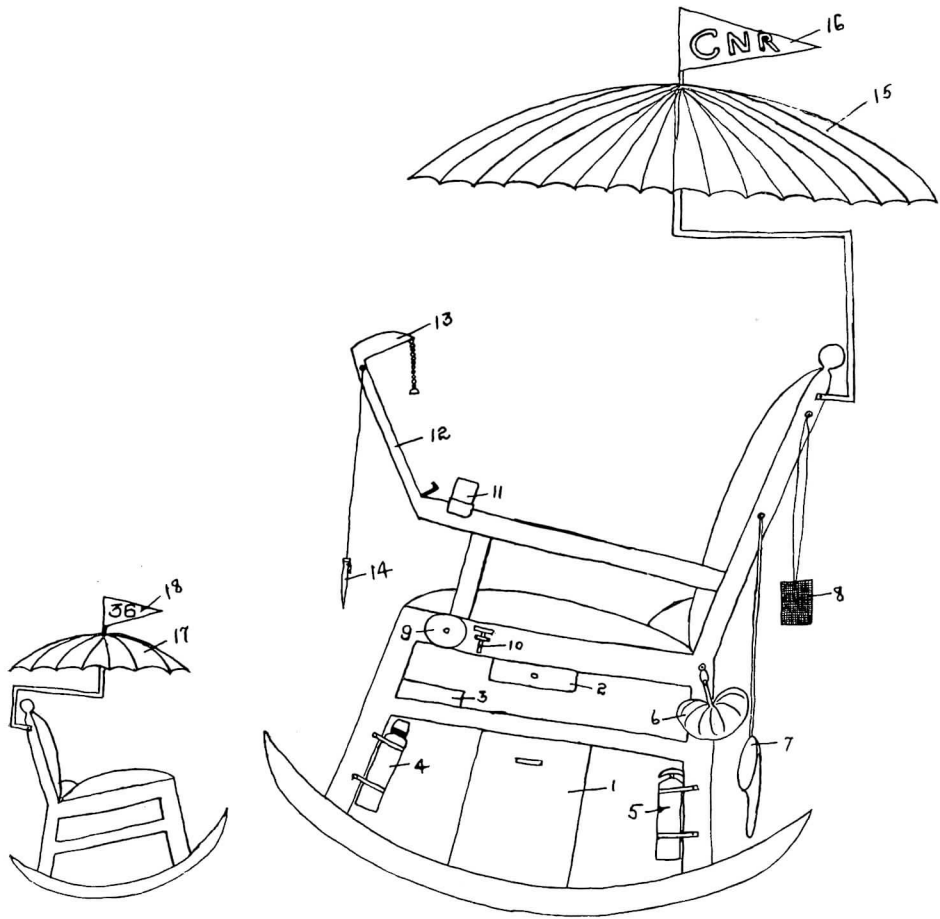

- From another group of girls, Itchy and Goo hear disjointed phrases about wrestling bouts, writing on the board, Philosophy and strong men contests.

- Afraid to break the spell, they cannot ask the girls to be more explicit and they turn away from the bubbling laughter. Wandering into a room captioned: SOMETHING TO REMEMBER US BY—our modern students view an avenue of glass cases. Hastily glancing at their contents, they approach the key card, which describes these same contents:

1. Peg Fenner's tonsils
2. Dorothy Brennan's measles
3. Marion White's measles
4. Nettie Langlois's measles
5. Helen Brennan's appendix
6. Elizabeth Mary Otis's appendix (7 inches long) and her pink eye
7. Mary Gannon's pink eye
8. Jane Callaghan's cold
9. Marie Reiser's mythical appendix
10. Dorra Kenny's sprained ankle
11. Marge McGrail's knee
12. Isobel Welcke's ankle

13. Gert McGuire's broken arm
 14. Mimi Krussman's ankle
 15. Isabel Basanta's broken finger
 16. A small jar containing a brain—the composite of the class. Apparently provoked by the Philosophy Prof's quest for a brain.
- Itchy and Goo, overcome by the physical obstacles that the class had had to face, enter the last room in the Museum, proclaiming in green and white letters: THE LITTLE THINGS OF LIFE.
 - Again they seek the key card and wander about enjoying what to them spells the real '36. Thus, they scream at—
 1. A much withered orange petunia
 2. A weebegone cat (belonging to Mr. Gavigan) who ate the petunia
 3. A bath brush (a little concession to Kay Gillen's inherent sadism)
 4. A much dilapidated brief case (you guess)
 5. Marge Horgan's feet (for various reasons)
 6. Marge Kennedy's knitting
 7. Mr. W. A. S. Dollard's green bag
 8. Exam paper plentifully sprinkled with TSK'S (page Dr. Farrell)
 9. Marie Reisert's brown hat (Marge Ely didn't get it!)
 - 10. Mary Galvin's hair ribbons
 - 11. Mercedes Ferrer's pen sketches of the faculty
 - 12. Muriel Paige's dress with the buttons which made so much noise in the Library (that sanctum of QUIET)
 - 13. Recent Social Trends text (AT which even Itchy and Goo shudder)
 - 14. Jane Callaghan's "Itchy-goo"
 - 15. Anne Reilly's Greek classic
 - 16. Edith Ryan's bottle of ink
 - 17. Marie Sisk's laugh (make her laugh some day)
 - 18. E. M. O.'S Locker.
 - When Itchy and Goo return to the central room, they find nobody there and the age of a century again settled upon the building. Looking at the happy faces on the wall, they are seized with a feeling of love and envy. As Gus (the Third) ushers them out Itchy inquires, "What did you say about times being bad a hundred years ago?"
 - To which Goo answers, "Forget it. They were a swell class, loved everything and never forgot how to laugh. In them, we find the secret of success to which they aspired and attained. Don't you wish we lived in the good old days?"
